Opportunity to Reinvent African Healthcare

Prof Yap Boum II

Unite For Sight Global Health & Innovation Conference
Yale, US
April 14th 2019
"What counts in life is not the mere fact that we have lived...

It is what difference we have made to the lives of others that will determine the significance of the live we lead "
Outline

• African and/or Western Medicine?
  – The case of Buruli Ulcer
• Technology to improve healthcare?
  – Inside the Ebola Outbreak in DRC
• Bridge the gap toward UHC: No one left behind!
  – Social Innovation
• Who will decide?
Ebola Outbreak in DRC...
The opportunity for Technology...
Services offered by iDocta are as follows:
- Medical consultations at home;
- Medical consultations in iDocta premises or in hospitals exclusively on appointments;
- Telemedicine (instant chat, image transfer, video call);
- Facilitation of collection of samples at home for laboratory examinations;
- Delivery of medications at home;
What would you do (girls) if there were no sanitary pad in supermarket?
Access to Menstrual Health for all!

- Menstruation is a natural process for girls and women.
- However, 1 in 10 girls in Africa will skip up to 20% of the school year owing to limited or no access to sanitary towels.
- This forces girls to improvise with material that leaves them susceptible to infections.
- Reports of girls exchanging 'sex for pads' in slums are not uncommon.
- The long-term impact is devastating with a strong correlation observed between school dropout and earlier marriage and pregnancy.
Who will decide?
Thank you for Reinventing African Healthcare with us!

Yap.boum@epicentre.msf.org